

Cookies Policy

Oaklin uses small text files called cookies to analyse how our website is being used, for instance which pages visitors go to most often, or if users are receiving error messages from our site. These cookies don't collect information that identifies a visitor and all the information collected is aggregated and therefore anonymous. It is only used to improve how our website works. Generation of reports and analysis is carried out by Google Analytics. Google's privacy policy is available at: <http://www.google.com/privacypolicy.html>. You can refuse the use of cookies.

How to refuse the use of cookies
